

Rohail Aslam - Creative Specialist

I have a passion for working within the community and education sectors. With people of all ages and all communities.

I have been working with an ever-growing interest in the positive effects that creativity in education seems to have on people regardless of their age or social situation. This effect of positive introspection on all individuals is, I believe one of the most under-rated priorities of any community striving to create a better environment for its inhabitants.

I am an Artist/Public sector Consultant/Designer/Published Writer with over 10 years experience of working in the Third/Educational/Community sectors on a very wide range of subject matter and age-groups. From community arts projects with children and parents, Diversity consultation projects for local councils through to writing my first book of children's stories and getting it published by Heinemann Library Publishers, I have got all the passion, creative skills, and experience needed to connect with people of all communities and at all levels.
